Programme overview
Human Geography covers a wide range of topics – from environmental and landscape changes to planetary urbanisation and economic crises. The scope of the subject is such that it will give you an excellent scientific base that can easily be combined with other academic subjects.

The Master’s programme in Human Geography aims to provide students with:

• knowledge of the development of theories in human geography and their relations to theories in other social and environmental sciences
• understanding of the spatial dimensions of social, economic, cultural and environmental processes and their importance for welfare and living conditions in various geographical contexts
• skills in methods and the use of advanced tools to analyse the complex relations between development processes on local, regional, national and global scales
• competence to carry out scientific investigations, analyses and advanced planning related to political, economic, social and environmental issues in an increasingly complex world

The main areas of study included in the programme are urban, social and landscape geography, economic geography and political ecology.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS
A Bachelor’s degree in human geography or equivalent. English Level 6 (equivalent to IELTS 6.5, TOEFL 90). See www.lunduniversity.lu.se for details on English proficiency levels.

What drew me to the Master’s Programme in Human Geography was the possibility to study an almost limitless set of issues tied to how various urban and rural spaces are produced, construed, appropriated, lived, struggled over, and destroyed. I also really appreciated how teaching premiered messy, and sometimes contradictory, real processes over simplified theoretical models.”

Erik Jönsson from Sweden, now postdoctoral researcher at Lund University and UC, Berkeley
